Community Banners: Fabrics of society

Community Banners: Fabrics of society

Thank You for being part of Community Banners: *Fabrics of society

Through this project, you can feed into the designs for fabric banners which will be displayed along Petticoat Lane Market in 2021. The project is inviting children, families, residents and community members from around the area to explore their ideas about textiles, prints and fabrics.

These ideas will be shared with students in the Textiles department at London Metropolitan University in Aldgate, who will draw upon them to produce designs for the banners. You will be invited to see the proposed banner designs before they have been finalised, and to select your favourite ones. The initial ideas won't necessarily appear on the banners, but the students will be influenced by them to build the designs. We would also like to share your ideas in a further display later this year.

More on the project

Community Banners is a vibrant, creative and collaborative community project. Residents, school children, sewing groups, organisations, and members of the wider community will be invited to feed into designs which will explore and reflect upon the rich cultural heritage of the area, in partnership with London Metropolitan University and Leyden Gallery.
